Summer 2018 – Information and Instructions Priority Deadline April 30th

The summer term is the final term in the academic year at Texas Southern University. Therefore, if a student has completed the FAFSA for the academic year, the application also includes the summer 2018. Students enrolled for summer courses will be evaluated for summer aid by the Office of Student Financial Assistance starting the end of April.

- Submitting an application does not guarantee the availability of aid.
- Every effort will be made to award the student during initial awarding or a reallocation of funds until the final date of the term.
- Your summer application will remain active until you submit a written request to cancel your application to the Office of Student Financial Assistance.
- Students failing to officially withdraw from the university and receiving a payment are otherwise considered enrolled unless reported as non-attending by the instructor.
- Students withdrawing after the first class day are subject to a withdrawal calculation to determine how much aid was earned by the student and how much aid must be returned to the Title IV programs.
- Students may only receive payment for repeating the same course in which they receive a passing grade for two instances; the third instance will not be payable through Title IV aid.
- The cost of attendance will be adjusted to reflect the actual hours of enrollment after the 5th class day. Students whose total enrollment is less than the total number of projected hours may owe a refund of aid to the federal programs. Students must monitor their enrollment and account to determine if a payment is required. All payments are due and payable on demand; however, students are encouraged to contact the Student Accounting Office for payment arrangements and due dates.
